

VISION FOR THE FUTURE

COMMUNITIES struggling to keep their public transport, schools, jobs and their young people... an ageing population placing increased burdens on dwindling local amenities...

The downside of living in such an area of natural beauty and tranquillity is all too apparent today, and the future impact of climate change and energy shortages can only add greater stress to real communities.

A group of planners, architects and others with backgrounds in transport, energy, housing, etc, have formed under the title Calon Cymru.

Their aim is to promote their inspiring vision for the sustainable "green" economic development of an area of Mid-Wales stretching from Knighton to Llanelli, basing their plans around that most under-used of local resources, the Heart of Wales Line.

Knighton

To find out more, there will be a meeting at Knighton Community Centre on Tuesday, April 20, when the Teme Valley Environmental Group (TVEG) will be hosting a presentation by Martin Golder of the Calon Cymru Concept Group.

In addition, a range of local environmental groups, from Knucklas Community Land Trust to the Heart of Wales Line Travellers Association, will be present with displays relating to their own activities, so it will be an ideal opportunity to do a bit of networking.

The event kicks off at 7.30pm next Tuesday and, needless to say, everyone is welcome.
