Dear Prime Minister

I am writing to let you know that I support the Energy Bill Revolution, and would like you to act on its recommendations.

Detailed research proves that the most effective long term solution for the Government to reduce energy bills and end fuel poverty is to help households make their homes as energy efficient as possible. This would also create jobs, and reduce carbon emissions.

I urge you to make use of carbon tax revenue to install energy-efficient measures in UK homes: currently the NHS spends over £1 billion a year treating people who are ill because their homes are too cold.

One in four households is now in fuel poverty, and all over the UK people are struggling to pay fuel bills. This must change.

Although the Green Deal and the Energy Company Obligation will help deliver energy efficiency measures in households, they do not go far enough. The government needs to invest much more in energy efficiency.

Please live up to your claim to be the 'greenest government ever' and use the billions raised from carbon tax revenue to make UK homes energy-efficient.

Yours sincerely,
